

---

Contents

---

Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	1
PART I
Clinical aspects of loss and disconnection	7
1 Low-frequency Modern Kleinian Therapy and one patient's somatic retreat from unbearable loss	9
2 Working with psychotic process: noticing the counter-transference and transference dynamic in early analytic treatment	23
3 Depressive conflict and the counter-transference experience	31
PART II
Counter-transference elements of modern Kleinian psychoanalytic work	41
4 Pushed to the limits in the counter-transference	43
5 Working to understand our role in the patient's mind: counter-transference and the problems of immersion	56
6 Patients marked by crippling loss: counter-transference issues and early phase treatment	67

PART III
Modern Kleinian Therapy and the treatment of turbulent couples	79
7 Modern Kleinian couples therapy: pathological organizations and psychic retreats	81
8 Couples treatment from a Kleinian perspective	94
PART IV
Character structure as portrayed in film	111
9 Another fear and another tear: psychoanalytic considerations of the film Another Year	113
10 Good Neighbors : a film review lost and without – revenge, capture, and substitution	126
PART V
Problems with psychic equilibrium	131
11 Does the patient desire psychic growth or restoration of psychic equilibrium? The life-and-death instincts in the counter-transference	133
12 Starving for scraps: the technical challenges of pre-depressive patients desperate to maintain psychic equilibrium	144
Bibliography	158
Index	164