

CONTENTS

Acknowledgments ix

Introduction xi

PART ONE: The Theory 1

1. The basic theory: Two systems 3
2. Evidence in everyday life of two modes of information processing 28
3. The content and organization of the experiential system:
With an emphasis on basic needs and beliefs 37
4. Motivation further considered and emotions 58
5. Interactions between and within the two systems: Conflict, compromises, synergy, repression, and dissociation 71

PART TWO: Development and Adjustment 101

6. Development 103
7. Coping and defense mechanisms 138
8. The maladaptive behavior of everyday life 162
9. Neurosis, post-traumatic stress disorder, psychosis, and autism 187
10. Depression 209

PART THREE: Clinical Applications 229

11. Psychotherapy 1: Constructive thinking, cognitive therapy, behavior therapy, cognitive-behavioral therapy 231
12. Psychotherapy 2: Psychodynamic therapy, client-centered therapy, gestalt therapy, psychosynthesis, cognitive-experiential therapy,
relapse 252
13. Psychotherapy 3: Communicating with the experiential system through the use of fantasy 273

PART FOUR: Broader Implications 297

14. Implications 299

Index 321