

---

---

Contents

---

---

Foreword: Why Is Kant Worth Fighting For? Slavoj Žižek	vii
Introduction	1
1 The (Moral-)Pathology of Everyday Life	7
2 The Subject of Freedom	21
What freedom?	22
What subject?	25
3 The Lie	43
Kant and 'the right to lie'	43
The Unconditional	53
The Sadeian trap	58
4 From the Logic of Illusion to the Postulates	64
The 'stormy ocean' of illusion	64
'Person also means mask'	68
The passage to the postulates	75
5 Good and Evil	79
Fantasy within the limits of reason alone	79
The logic of suicide	82

Degrees of evil	86
Like angels, like devils	90
The act as 'subjectivation without subject'	96
6 The Act and Evil in Literature	106
The case of Valmont	107
The case of Don Juan	121
7 Between the Moral Law and the Superego	140
The quantum of affect	140
The sublime and the logic of the superego	149
The status of the law	160
8 Ethics and Tragedy in Psychoanalysis	170
Some preliminary remarks	170
Oedipus, or the Outcast of the Signifier	175
The theft of desire – and the mother in exchange	175
The death of the Thing	187
What is a father?	192
What shall we do with Oedipus?	197
The hostage of the word	200
Sygne, or the Enjoyment of the Remainder	211
Ethics and terror	213
Enjoyment – my neighbour	221
The Real in ethics	234
From pure desire to the drive	238
9 Thus . . .	249
Index	261