

---

Contents

Part I Demystification

1	Yoga: Original Concepts and History . . . . .	3
1.1	Introduction. . . . .	3
1.2	Yoga as a Mystery and Need for Demystification . . . . .	4
1.2.1	Some Other Reasons for the Misconceptions . . . . .	5
1.3	Original Definitions of Yoga . . . . .	6
1.3.1	Yoga , Its Meanings and the Minor Conceptual Differences from the Samkhya . . . . .	7
1.3.2	Various Forms of Yoga . . . . .	8
1.4	Yoga: Origins and Scriptures . . . . .	10
1.4.1	Origins of Yoga from the Samkhya System in Ancient India . . . . .	10
1.4.2	The Oral Tradition of Yoga . . . . .	10
1.4.3	Sanskrit ( Vedic ) and Pali (Buddhist): The Original Languages of Yogic Scriptures . . . . .	11
1.4.4	The Varieties of Yogic Scriptures . . . . .	12
1.4.5	Patanjali's Yoga Sutras : A Brief Summary . . . . .	14
1.4.6	Classics on Hatha Yoga . . . . .	16
1.5	The Four Major Philosophical Systems of Yoga : The Vedas , Vedanta , Shramana , and Tantra . . . . .	17
1.5.1	Yoga in the Vedas ( Samkhya/Rig-Vedic Philosophy) . . . . .	17
1.5.2	Yoga in the Vedanta ( Upanishads ) . . . . .	18
1.5.3	Summary of Yoga in the Veda ( Samkhya ) and Vedanta ( Upanishad ) . . . . .	19
1.6	Great Contribution of the Shramanic (Non-Hindu) Philosophies: Rise of Meditation in the System of Yoga . . . . .	20
1.6.1	Yoga Versus Meditation . . . . .	21
1.6.2	Seminal Contributions of Gautama Buddha into the Meditative System of Yoga . . . . .	22
1.6.3	Buddha's Middle Way . . . . .	22

1.7	Tantra : The Fourth and the Newest System of Yogic Philosophy . . . . .	23
1.8	Yogic Philosophies Bridge Across the Ideologies of All Four Schools: The Veda ( Samkhya ), Vedanta ( Upanishads ), Shramana , and Tantra . . . . .	24
1.9	History of Yoga. . . . .	25
1.9.1	Yoga in Ancient India . . . . .	26
1.9.2	Yoga in Medieval India. . . . .	26
1.9.3	Yoga in Modern India . . . . .	27
1.9.4	Yoga Beyond India: Spread to the Far East . . . . .	28
1.9.5	Yoga Beyond India: Spread to the West . . . . .	29
1.10	Some Further Clarifications . . . . .	30
1.10.1	Spirituality Versus Religiousness . . . . .	30
1.10.2	Yoga Is Not Religious . . . . .	31
1.11	Concluding Remarks. . . . .	33
	References . . . . .	33
2	Yoga, Mind, and the Psychosomatics . . . . .	37
2.1	Introduction. . . . .	37
2.2	Yoga and the Mind (Consciousness, [Sans. chitta ]): Some Key Terms . . . . .	38
2.3	Yogic Consciousness (Mind [Sans. chitta ]) and Its Varieties as the Meditator Ascends in the Meditative Path . . . . .	40
2.4	Phenomenology of Human Experience and Role of the Mind (Consciousness) in Its Creation . . . . .	41
2.5	Mind ( Consciousness ): A Bundle of Five Things ( Aggregates ) . . . . .	42
2.6	Central Problem Inherent in the Nature of the Mind: Projection ( Vikshepa ) That Causes Illusion ( Maya ) and Ignorance ( Avidya ) About the Reality . . . . .	43
2.6.1	Reversal of the Projections Is the Key Mechanism of Action of Yoga . . . . .	45
2.7	Models of the Mind (Consciousness) in the Yogic Philosophies . . . . .	46
2.7.1	The Monkey Metaphor: Explains the Inherently Unstable Nature of the Mind . . . . .	46
2.7.2	The Tripartite Model of Human Experience: The Projector Analogy . . . . .	47
2.7.3	The Lake Model of Consciousness (Mind): The Real Self Lies Deep Down in the Bottom . . . . .	49
2.7.4	Yoga Sutras Says That Our Perception of Reality Is Illusory Because of the Sensorial Mind . . . . .	49

2.8	The Profound Psychosomatic Views Found in the Yogic Philosophies . . . . .	50
2.8.1	Mind and Stress: Yoga as the Remedy . . . . .	52
2.8.2	Yogic Science as Mind–Body (Psychosomatic) Medicine: Some Mechanisms . . . . .	53
2.8.3	Deep Connections Between Yoga and the Mental Health . . . . .	53
2.9	Concluding Remarks . . . . .	54
	References . . . . .	54
3	Brain, Mind, and Soul: Bridging the Gap . . . . .	57
3.1	Introduction . . . . .	57
3.1.1	Human Experience Is Tripartite: The One Who Sees (Seer/Self), the Scene (Object/World), and the Interpreting Interface (Mind) . . . . .	58
3.1.2	The Trilogy in the Human Existence: Body (Brain), Mind, and Soul . . . . .	58
3.2	Brain: The Most Complex Organ of the Human Body . . . . .	58
3.2.1	Facts About the Human Brain . . . . .	58
3.2.2	The Brain as an Important Locus of All Experiences Including the Spiritual Experiences . . . . .	60
3.2.3	More Recent Research on the Brain: Top Brain and Bottom Brain . . . . .	60
3.3	Concept of the Mind in Yoga . . . . .	61
3.3.1	Mind Is Graded: Lower to Higher . . . . .	61
3.4	Soul: The Third Entity of Existence and Experience . . . . .	63
3.4.1	Soul and the Pure Awareness (Pure Experience) . . . . .	64
3.5	Mapping Experiences onto the Brain: The Neural Circuitry . . . . .	65
3.5.1	Visual Pattern Recognition: The Prototype Process in Mapping Experiences onto the Brain . . . . .	66
3.5.2	The Five Major Groups of Circuits in Our Brain . . . . .	67
3.5.3	Functions of the Prefrontal Cortical (PFC) Tri-Circuit . . . . .	68
3.5.4	Close Relationship Between the OFC and Amygdala . . . . .	69
3.5.5	Frontal Tri-Circuits Modulate the Thalamus (the Sensory Gate ) and the Basal Ganglia . . . . .	70
3.5.6	A Scenario Illustrating the Functions of the Prefrontal Tri-Circuits . . . . .	71
3.5.7	Role of Saliency and Facilitated Circuits in the Neural Mapping of Experience . . . . .	73
3.5.8	The Main Players in the Meditative Brain . . . . .	74

3.6	Experience is Representational and Knowledge ( Insight ) Changes These Representations . . . . .	75
3.6.1	Knowledge, Direct Experience, and Reality: Three Synonyms in Yoga . . . . .	76
3.6.2	Knowledge (Insight [Pali Nana , Panna ]) Is Graded . . . . .	77
3.6.3	Meditation as a Direct Experience : Beyond the Realm of the Intellectual Mind . . . . .	78
3.7	Meditative Process and Technique: Samyama as Its Prototype . . . . .	79
3.7.1	Knowing by Fusion: The Key Technique in Samyama . . . . .	80
3.7.2	Samyama Is a Two-Stage Process . . . . .	81
3.8	The Meditative Experiences: A Detailed Account . . . . .	82
3.8.1	Meditative Phenomenology and Parameters . . . . .	82
3.8.2	Losing the Sense of Time and Becoming One with the Experience: The Hallmarks of Yogic Absorption . . . . .	83
3.8.3	Meditation from the Perspective of Cognitive Neuroscience: Central Role of One's Attention . . . . .	85
3.8.4	The Meditative Brain : Preliminary Understandings . . . . .	86
3.9	Yogic and Cognitive Neurosciences: Remarkable Concurrences at Many Levels . . . . .	87
3.9.1	Concurrence with Respect to Conceptualization of Consciousness . . . . .	88
3.9.2	Concurrence with Respect to the Process of Samyama (or Mindfulness ): Metacognitive and Neural Paradigms of Consciousness . . . . .	89
3.9.3	Concurrence with Respect to Our Perception of Reality Versus Actual Reality : Map Versus Territory . . . . .	91
3.9.4	Concurrence with Respect to Conceptualization of Memory (Sanskrit Smriti ; Samskara ) and Its Role in Construing Experience as the Perceived Reality . . . . .	92
3.10	Neural Models of Yoga and Meditation: Revisiting the Bottom-up or Top-Down Debate . . . . .	95
3.10.1	The Bottom-Up Model of Yoga and Meditation (Pradhan 1998 onwards): Neurobiologically Informed, Standardized, and Compatible with Other Contemporary Models of Therapies . . . . .	96
3.10.2	Experience Can Change the Brain Structure and Functions: New Insights . . . . .	99
3.10.3	Experiences Can Change the Brain: Insights from Research on Psychotherapy . . . . .	100
3.10.4	Similarity Between Meditation and Psychotherapy . . . . .	101
3.10.5	The Id , Ego , and Superego from a Neural Paradigm . . . . .	102
3.11	Concluding Remarks . . . . .	103
	References . . . . .	103

Part II Standardization

4	Methods in Yoga and Mindfulness . . . . .	111
4.1	Introduction . . . . .	111
4.2	Some General Information on Meditation . . . . .	112
4.2.1	Concentration (Centering of Consciousness; FA Type) . . . . .	114
4.2.2	Mindfulness (OM Type) . . . . .	114
4.2.3	The Middle Way (Pali. Majjhima Patipada ; Madhyamaka ): The Meditative Lifestyle . . . . .	115
4.3	Morphology of Meditation as Taught by Buddha and Patanjali . . . . .	116
4.3.1	Meditative Access States: The Jhanas and Samapattis of Abhidhamma . . . . .	116
4.3.2	The Jhanas (Contemplative Raptures) . . . . .	117
4.3.3	The Samapattis (Attainments) . . . . .	118
4.3.4	The Yogic/Meditative Consciousness and Its Various Categories in the Abhidhamma . . . . .	118
4.4	Description of the Key Techniques in Yoga and Meditation . . . . .	120
4.4.1	Technique of Concentrative Meditation (Focused Attention—FA [Sans. trataka ]). . . . .	120
4.4.2	Description of the Technique . . . . .	122
4.4.3	Visual Trataka (Sans. Dristi Trataka ): Its Clinical Importance . . . . .	124
4.5	Techniques of Mindfulness Meditation (Pali: Satipatthana ). . . . .	125
4.5.1	Two Stages of Right Mindfulness . . . . .	126
4.5.2	Bare Attention and Clear Comprehension : The Two Pillars of Right Mindfulness . . . . .	126
4.5.3	The Four Stations of Mindfulness: Body, State of Mind, Feelings, and Phenomena . . . . .	128
4.5.4	Actual Practice of Right Mindfulness Is Twofold (Detailed Description Can Be Found in Nyanaponika, 1965, p. 85–107) . . . . .	130
4.5.5	Some Bare Instructions for of the Practice of Right Mindfulness (Nyanaponika 1954, p. 61–63) . . . . .	131
4.6	Meditative Breathing (Sans. Pranayama ): The Key Tool in Meditation . . . . .	132
4.6.1	Standardizations in the Two Breathing Meditations and Their Symptom-Specific Use in the Yoga and Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy (Y-MBCT®) . . . . .	134
4.6.2	Breathing Techniques Versus Breathing Meditations: Key Distinctions . . . . .	136
4.6.3	The Two Breathing Meditations in Terms of the Heart Rate Variability (HRV) . . . . .	136
	References . . . . .	137

5	Attempts at Standardization . . . . .	139
5.1	Standardization of Yoga and Meditation in Ancient India: Primacy of Buddha's Abhidhamma Pitaka and Patanjali's Yoga Sutras . . . . .	139
5.2	Buddha and His System of Standardization . . . . .	140
5.2.1	Elaboration on Buddha's Standardization of Mental Processes/Phenomena . . . . .	141
5.2.2	Buddha's Standardization in the Phenomenological Analysis of the Human Experience : The Five Aggregates . . . . .	142
5.2.3	Buddha's Standardization Involved in the Categorization of Human Consciousness . . . . .	144
5.2.4	Buddha's Standardization in the Analysis of Conditionality of the Human Existence . . . . .	145
5.2.5	Buddha's Standardization of the Truths and the Way of Life : The Four Noble Truths and the Noble Eightfold Path . . . . .	146
5.3	Standardization in the Yoga Sutras of Patanjali: The Eight-Limbed Yoga ( Raja Yoga ) . . . . .	148
5.4	Buddha (Sixth Century BC) and Patanjali (Fourth Century BC): Concurrence of Views Between the Two Early Champions . . . . .	150
5.5	The Subtle Difference Between the Meditative Methods of Buddha and Patanjali . . . . .	153
5.6	Tantra : Standardization of Yoga and Meditation Reaches Its Peak (Medieval and Modern India). . . . .	154
	References . . . . .	157

Part III Application

6	Yoga, Mindfulness, and Mentalization: Central Role of Attention and Compassion . . . . .	161
6.1	Attention, Empathy, and Compassion: The Key Qualities in a Meditator . . . . .	161
6.1.1	Empathy and Compassion: Phenomenology and Roots in the Four Noble Truths of Buddha . . . . .	162
6.2	Meditation Is Part of Yoga and Mindfulness Is a Type of Meditation . . . . .	163
6.3	What Is Mindfulness? . . . . .	164
6.3.1	How Right Mindfulness ( Satipatthana ) Gives Rise to the Insights ( Vipassana ) and Subsequent Liberation ( Nibbana )? . . . . .	165
6.4	Mentalization . . . . .	166
6.4.1	Dimensions of Mentalization . . . . .	167
6.4.2	Clarification of Closely Related Terms. . . . .	167

6.5	Mapping Mindfulness and Mentalization onto Our Brain: Neural Correlates of Empathy, Self-Observation, and Mentalization . . . . .	169
6.5.1	Neural Components Involved in Empathy . . . . .	170
6.5.2	Neural Components Involved in Self-Observation and Introspection . . . . .	171
6.5.3	Mirror Neuron System (MNS) : The Neural Correlates of Empathy and Meanings . . . . .	172
6.5.4	Neural Correlates of Mentalization: The Mentalizing Area of the Brain. . . . .	174
6.6	Therapeutic Use of Mindfulness and Mentalization: The Third Wave of Cognitive Behavioral Therapies (CBT) . . . . .	174
6.6.1	Mindfulness-Based Stress Reduction (MBSR). . . . .	176
6.6.2	Mentalization-Based Treatments (MBT) . . . . .	176
6.7	Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy (MBCT): Integrating Mindfulness with Cognitive Therapy. . . . .	177
6.7.1	Differences Between CBT and MBCT. . . . .	178
6.8	Concluding Remarks. . . . .	179
	References . . . . .	180
7	Yoga and Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy (Y-MBCT®): Use of Yoga in Its Entirety . . . . .	183
7.1	Introduction. . . . .	183
7.1.1	Seminal Contribution of the Buddha and Sage Patanjali in Laying Out the Early Foundations for Therapeutic Use of Yoga–Meditation. . . . .	185
7.2	Yoga as Psychotherapy . . . . .	186
7.2.1	Yoga and Contemplative Psychotherapies Including Psychoanalysis: A Comparison . . . . .	188
7.2.2	Common Grounds Between Yoga and Contemplative Psychotherapies Including Psychoanalysis. . . . .	189
7.2.3	Other Similarities Between Yoga and Deep Psychotherapies (Psychoanalysis) . . . . .	190
7.2.4	Some Basic Differences Between the Yogic Philosophies and Psychoanalysis . . . . .	192
7.3	Psychotherapeutic Use of Yoga in Its Entirety : The Yoga–Mindfulness-Based Cognitive Therapy (Y-MBCT, Pradhan and Mishra 1998 onward) . . . . .	193
7.3.1	The Specific Cognitive Behavioral Techniques Used in the Y-MBCT . . . . .	195
7.3.2	More Descriptions of the Key Techniques in the Y-MBCT. . . . .	196
7.3.3	SYMPro-SR and Y-MBCT Models: Evolution and Preliminary Data on Efficacy. . . . .	198
7.3.4	Preliminary Data from the Y-MBCT Clinic at Cooper University Hospital . . . . .	200

7.3.5	Some Descriptions About the Basics of Y-MBCT Models . . . . .	201
7.3.6	The Staged Meditation Protocols (SMPs) and the Five-Factor Model of Human Experience as the Main Pillars of Y-MBCT . . . . .	203
7.3.7	Standardizations Involved in the Y-MBCT Models . . . . .	206
7.4	Uniqueness of the Y-MBCT as Psychotherapeutic Models . . . . .	207
7.5	TIMBER ® (Trauma Interventions Using Mindfulness-Based Extinction and Reconsolidation; Pradhan et al. 2012 Onward): A Prototype of the Y-MBCT Protocols. . . . .	209
	References . . . . .	212
8	Yoga in Maintenance of Psychophysical Health . . . . .	217
8.1	Yoga and Meditation: Rationale and Feasibility in Health care . . . . .	217
8.1.1	Why Yoga–Meditation if There Is a Pill? . . . . .	219
8.2	Specific Effects of Yoga and Meditation on Brain and Body . . . . .	219
8.3	The Basic Dilemma of a Researcher When Testing the Efficacy of Mind–Body Interventions . . . . .	220
8.3.1	Methodologically Sound Clinical Trial of Mindfulness Interventions: Essentials . . . . .	222
8.3.2	Efficacy of Yoga and Meditation: Empirical Evidence . . . . .	223
8.4	Yoga in Maintenance of Psychophysical Health: Attention and Memory Are the Main Tools . . . . .	224
8.4.1	Meditation, Attention, and the Default Mode Network of the Brain. . . . .	225
8.4.2	The Basic Mechanisms Involved in Attention . . . . .	226
8.4.3	Basics of Memory and Its Various Categories . . . . .	228
8.5	Attention and Memories in the Information Processing Model in Humans . . . . .	231
8.5.1	Utility of Yoga–Meditation in the Various Steps in the Information Processing Model . . . . .	232
8.5.2	Cellular Mechanisms of Long-Term Memory and Connection with Yoga and Mindfulness . . . . .	234
8.6	Practice of Yoga–Meditation: General Considerations. . . . .	236
8.6.1	Integrated Posture [Sans. Asana ] . . . . .	237
8.6.2	Obstacles to the Practice of Yoga–Meditation . . . . .	238
8.7	Concluding Remarks. . . . .	239
	References . . . . .	239
	Endorsements . . . . .	243